I'm giving a talk in Paris tomorrow. Here are some slides; they won't come as a shock to regular readers, but it may be useful to see them all in one place.

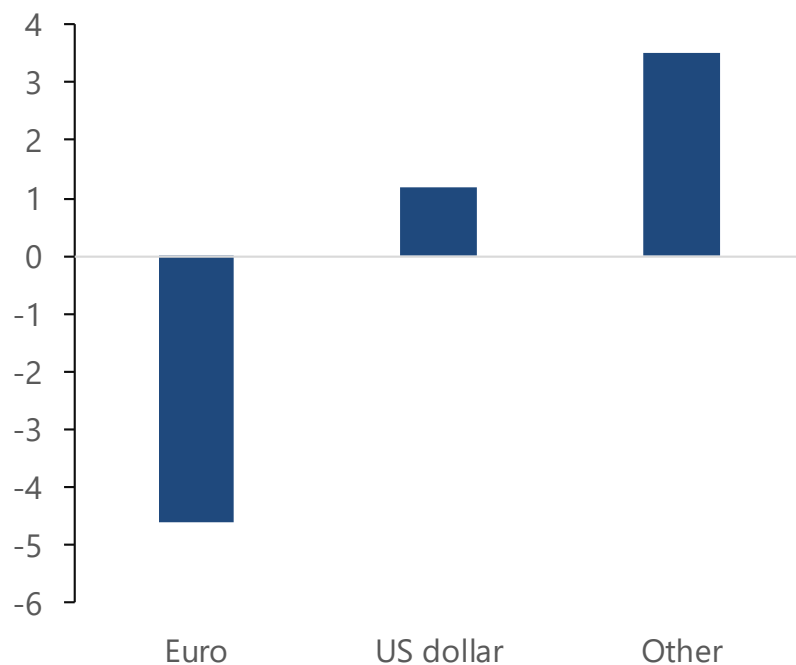

First, I make the case that the overall economic crisis is driven by private debt, not public debt:

Inflation convergence but a lot of real divergence

Euro area trade invoiced in euro has diminished

Euro area: Change in invoicing of extra EU manufactured goods exports
(Currency shares, percentage points, 2010-2016)

Euro area: Change in euro invoicing of extra EU manufactured goods exports
(Percentage points; 2010-2016)

Two birds with one stone: CMU for shock absorption and long-term growth

Our priorities for the euro area and the euro

Policies that promote growth, stability and integration key for the international role of the euro

Structural reforms

- Deepen the single market (especially the service sector)
- Country-specific structural reforms to enhance resilience and boost productivity growth
- Strengthen EU reform governance (benchmarking; EU reform delivery tool)

Robust and integrated financial sector

- Complete Banking Union (Operationalize the SRF backstop; EDIS)
- Build a European Capital Markets Union
- Repair balance sheets (reduce NPLs)

Sound fiscal policies and shock insurance

- Simplified, enforceable EU fiscal rules
- Support macroeconomic stabilization through a Central Fiscal Capacity
- National fiscal policies towards imbalances reduction
