

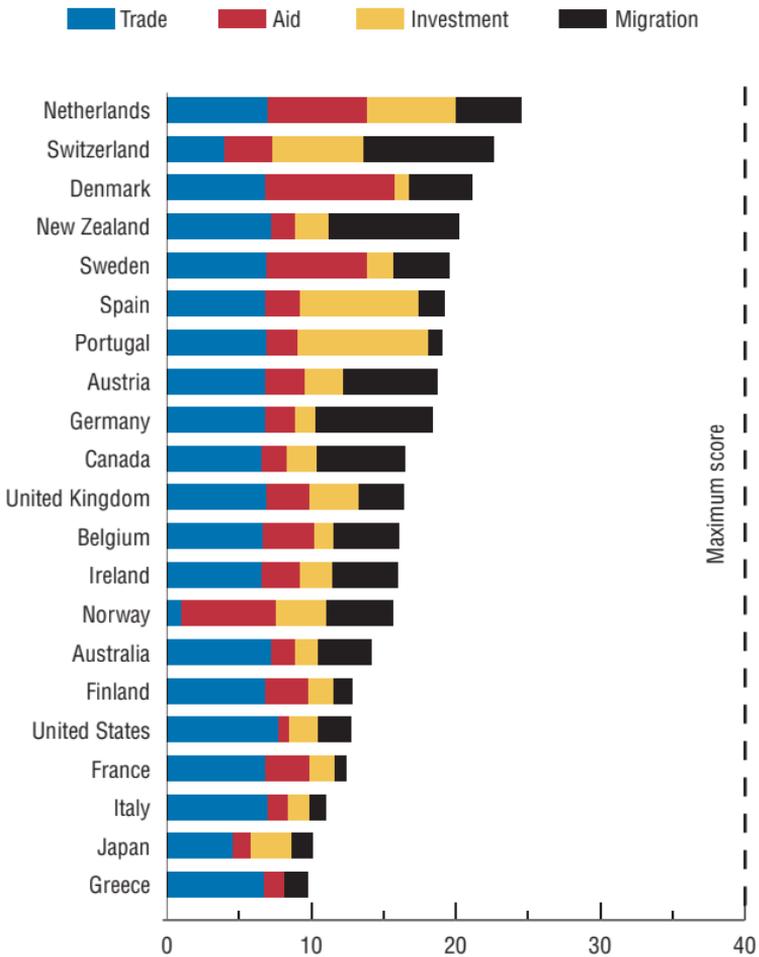

Figure 1.8. How Much Do Developed Country Policies Help Developing Countries?¹

(Commitment to development index)

Developed country policies appear only modestly supportive of development, particularly in the largest countries.

Source: Center for Global Development.

¹The index measures the impact of advanced country policies on development in the areas of trade, aid, investment, and migration; the maximum score in each category is 10. For details of the calculations, see Birdsall and Roodman (2003).